IN MEMORIAM

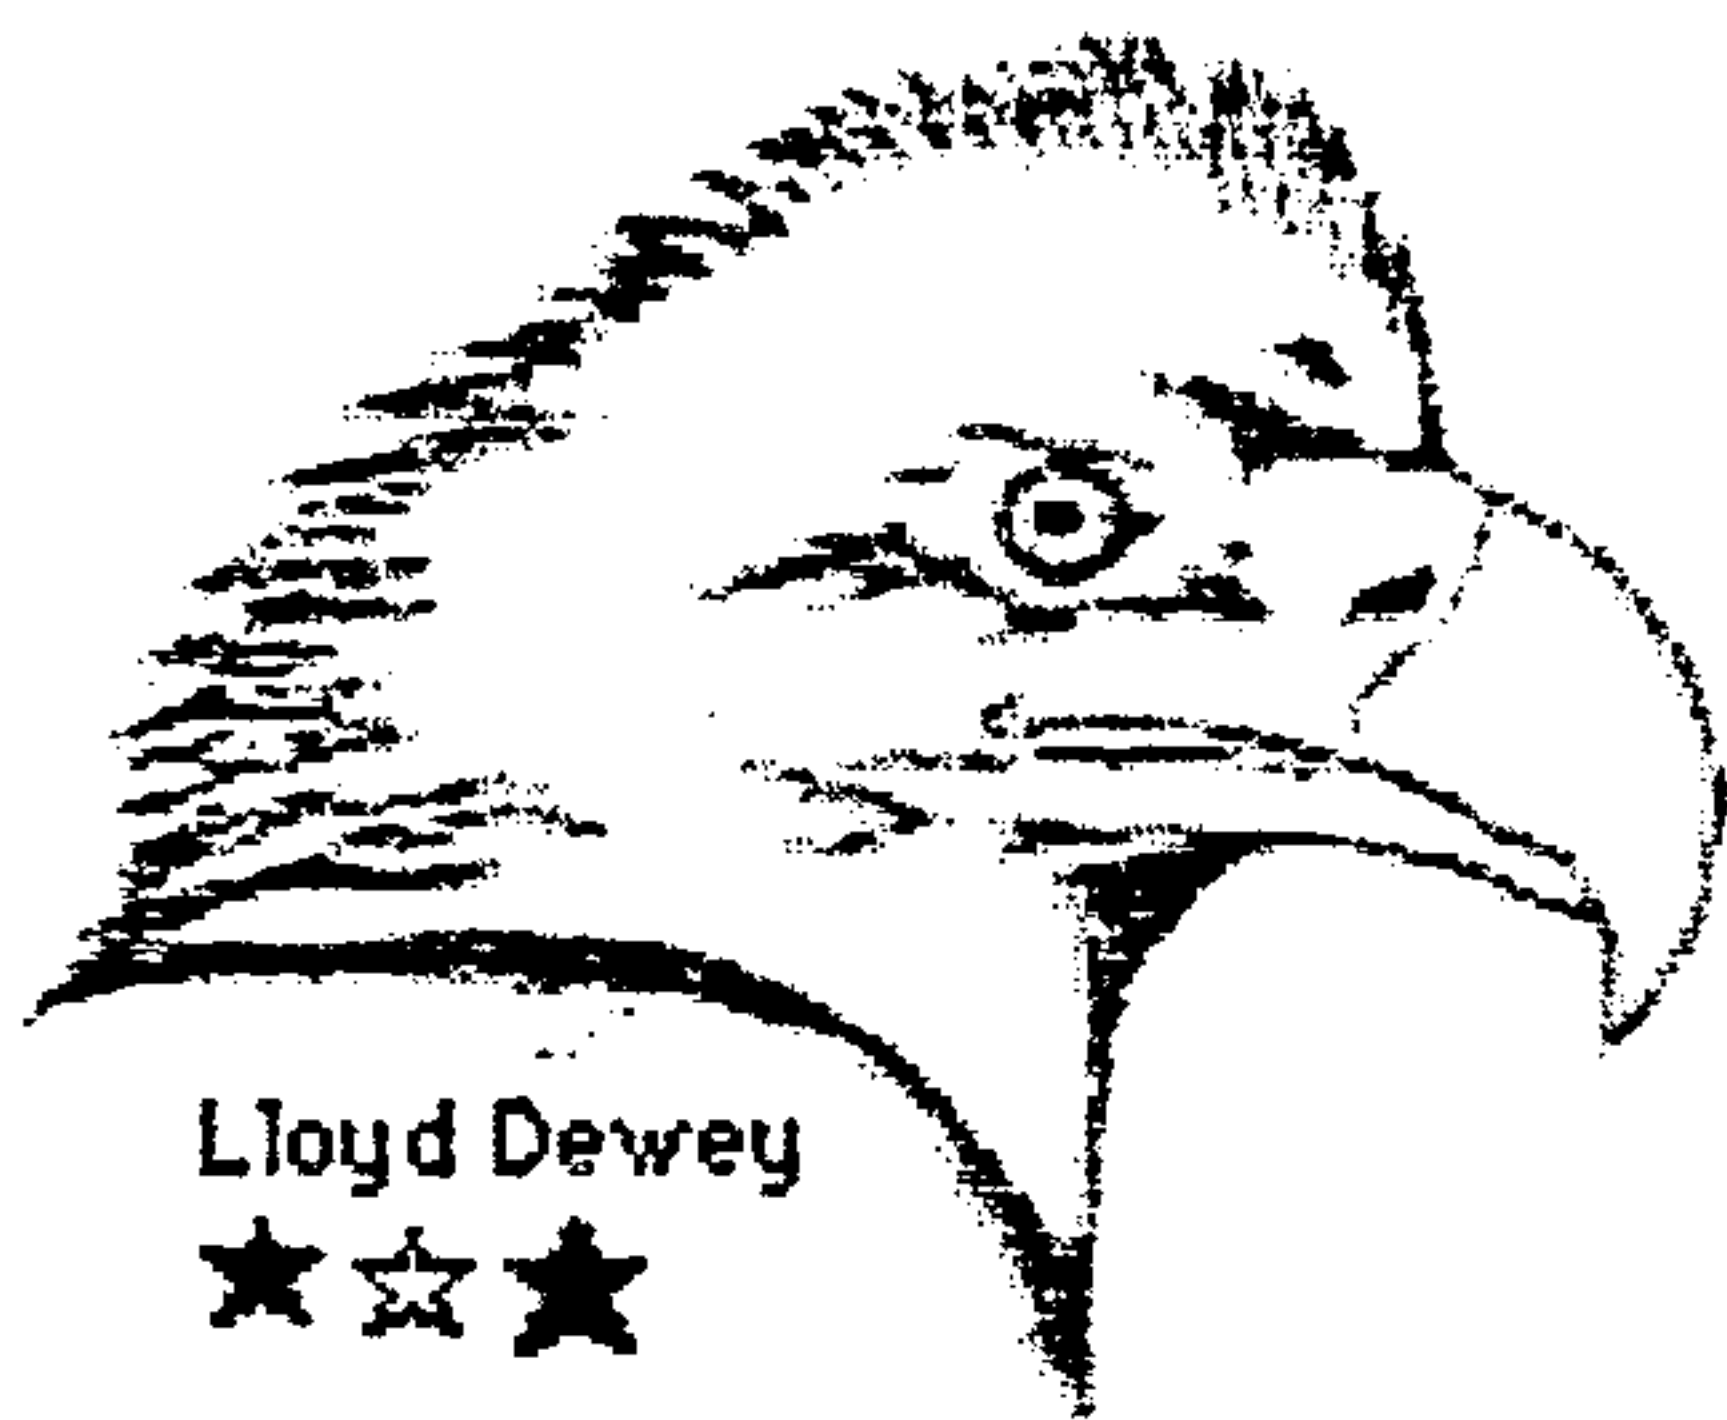

The Arapaho Animal Dictionary is dedicated in memory of "Nii'ceet", (Good Shot) Ambrose Brown who contributed many of the Arapaho translations in this book. Nii'ceet, generously gave for the youth of Wyoming Indian Schools to help preserve the Arapaho Language for future generations. It was his prayer the Arapaho Language would come back to the Arapaho people.

Ne'nihisiine'itiiwoohu3i'.

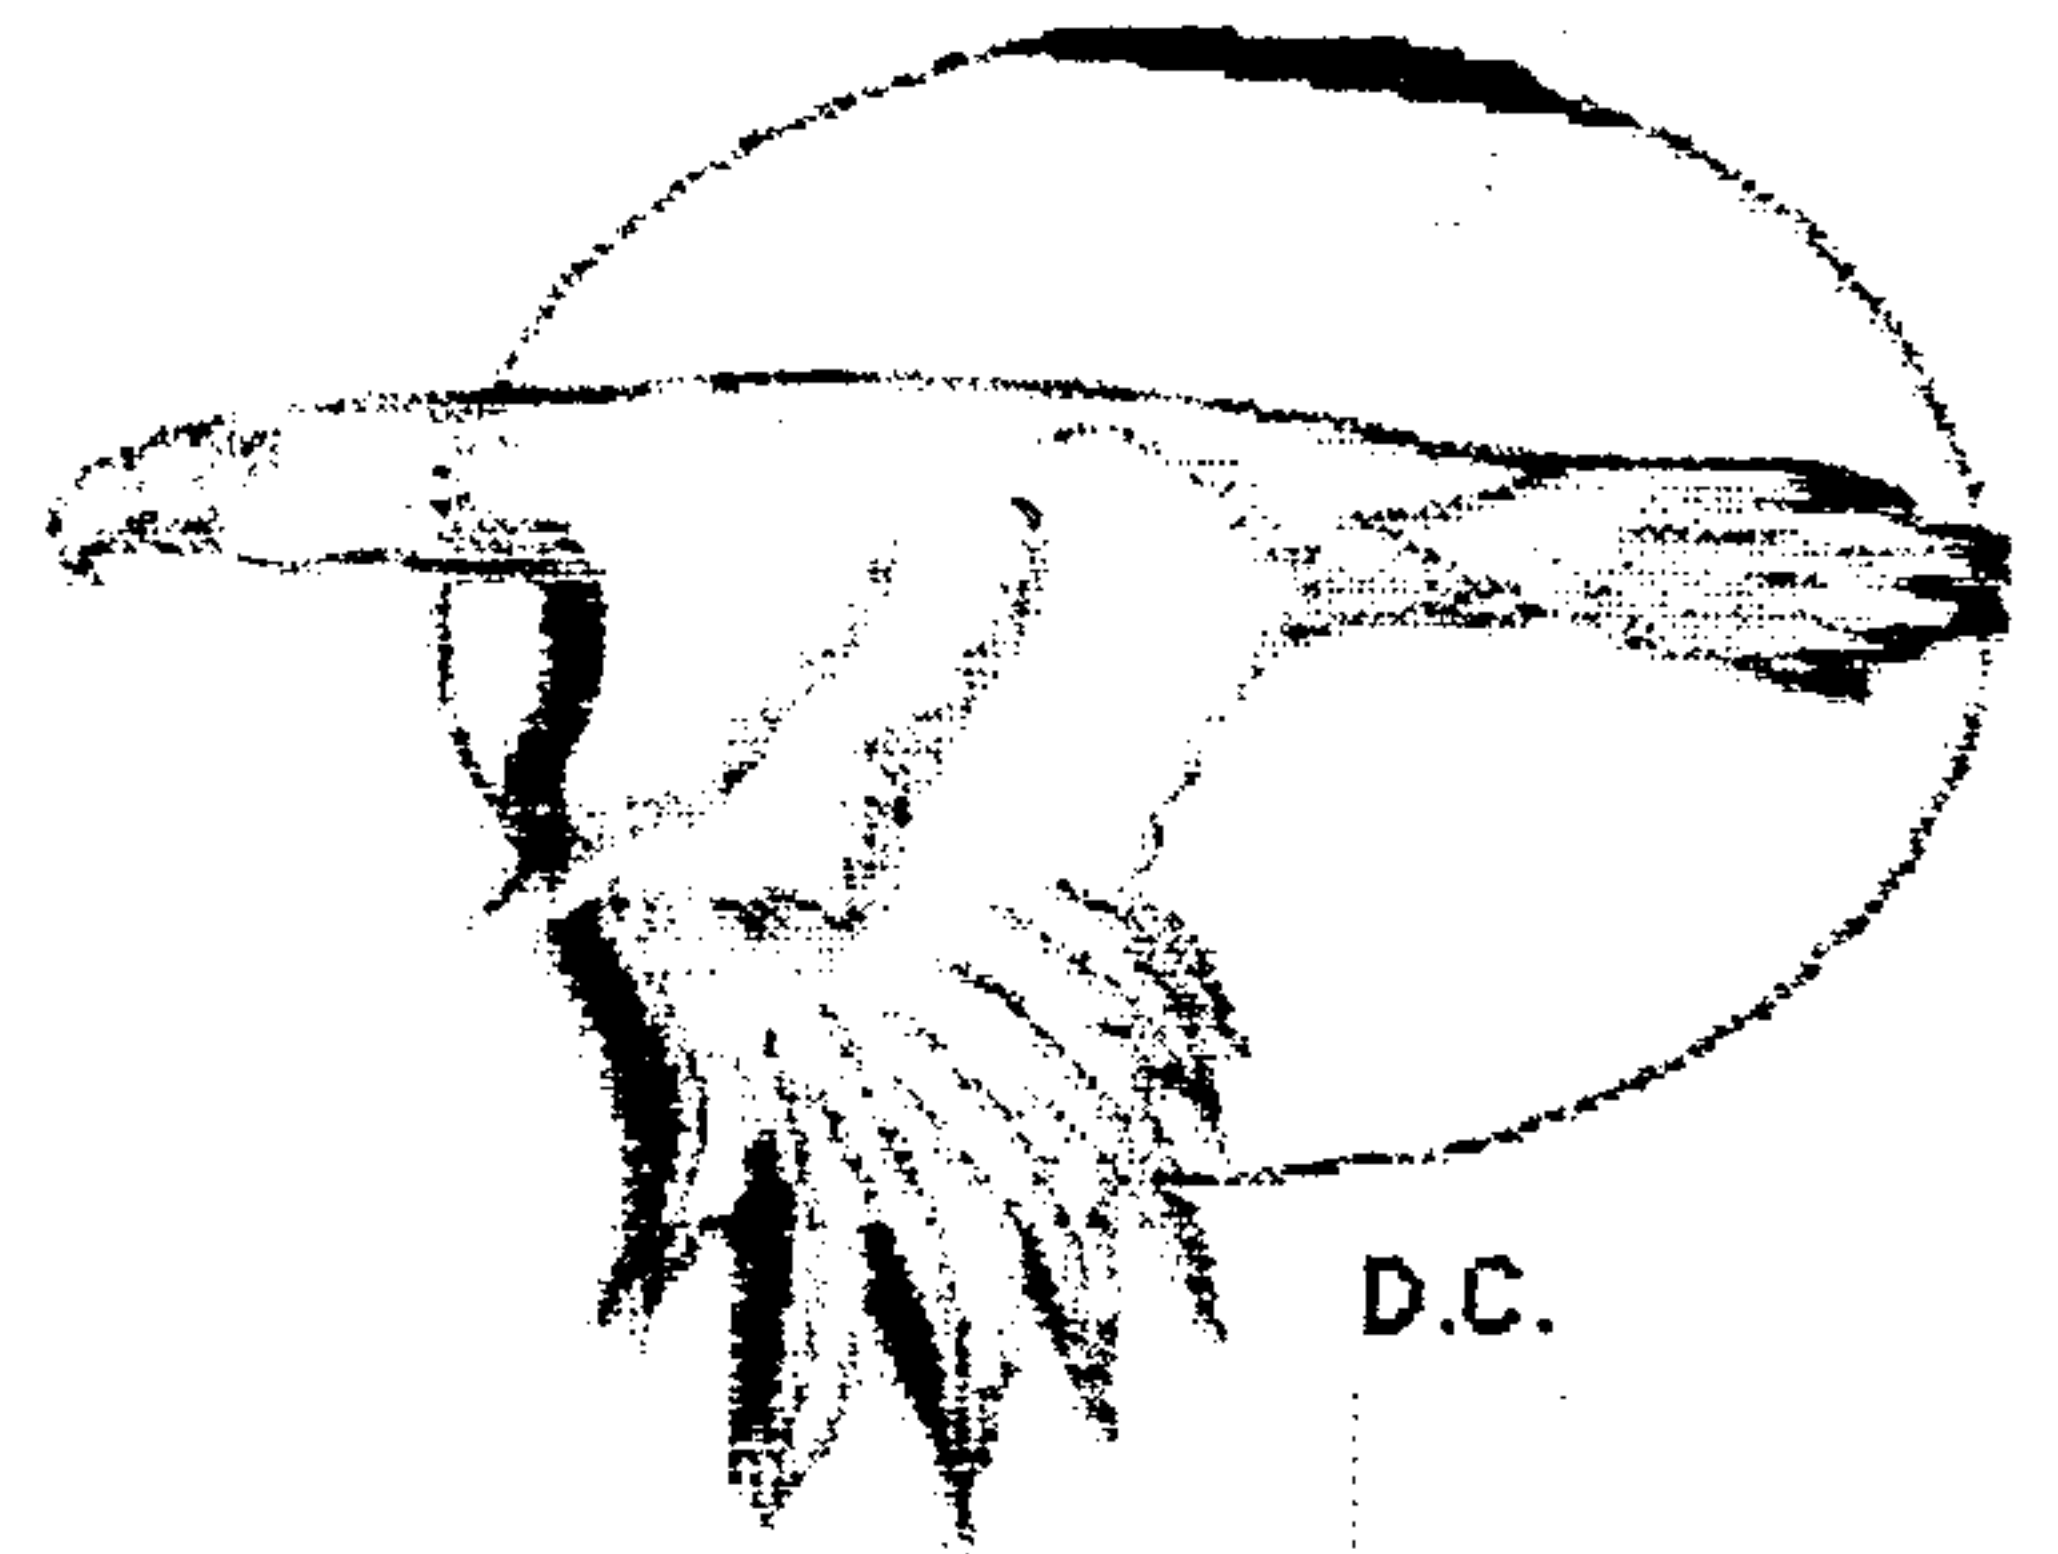

A long time ago, when Arapahos used to hunt, when they made a living for themselves, they trapped wild animals. And also, they fished in the rivers and lakes. They used hides for their clothing and their homes. That is how they lived.
